ing made to get them out of the way, and a fight ensued, and, presently firemen were sliding off the roof, and pelting down the chimneys, and bleeding over the entry carpet, and having boisterons encounters with spanners and brass horns on the stairs. And the next morning that Presbyterian divine and his family moved out. They said the place seemed to be too animated and sensational for a quiet domestic circle. They wanted a house where there was more calmness and peace; where they could have more security for their privacy and pianos, and for their front door and shingles, and peace of mind and window-sashes. In addition, remarks the London In addition, remarks the London fines, to the other historic houses condemned to pass under the auctioneer's hammer, is York House, Twickenham, ately the residence of the Counte de Paris, and fifty years ago the home of the well known sculptress, Hon. Mrs. Damer. From Cobbett's Memorials of Twickenham it appears that the house was originally given by the Crown to Hyde, Earl of Clarendon, on the public amouncement of his daughter's marriage with James II, then Duke of York, after whom it was made. Ironside infers EVIDENTIA the quickest and surest way of getting to Heaven is by committing murder and being hanged. The Good Book says, "Accursed is every one that hangeth on a tree," and, "The murderer hath not eternal life abiding in him;" but what does that matter? True, nearly all that Christendom knows concerning God and Jesus it obtains from the Bible that contains these plain statements; but after whom it was made. Ironside infers from the name of the house, and from the fact that his two daughters, the fact that his two daughters, Mary and Anne, were successively lensed in it, that the Duke of Ick originally resided here, and that he gave it up to his father-in-law on account of its proximity to Hanvilton Court and to the Duke of Lauderdsle's mansion at Ham. Hanover, be this asit may, Clarendon resided here during the zenith of his popularity, at all events, during the Summer months; and he himself tells us that when he attended the King at Hampton Court, he came home every night to his house at Twickenham. It was his literary villa," and Mr. Cobbett thinks that probably, here he received the visits of Een Jonson, Isaac Walton, Edmund Wallet, Sir Kenelm Digby, Chillingworth, and other distinguished men of letters.

"Rerary villa," and Mr. Cobbett thinks that probably, here he received the visits of Ben Jonson, Isaac Walton, Edmund Waller, Sir Kenelm Digby, Chillingworth, and other distinguished men of letters.

During the great fire of London, the fursitare of Dunkirk House was removed hither. It is certainly the tradition that queen Anne was born here, and one large partment on the first floor, on the northeds has ever since been called "Queen Anne's room." Lyons tells us that the bane subsequently became the property side has ever since been called "Queen anne's room." Lyons tells us that the home subsequently became the property of the Chancellor's second son, Lawrence llyde. Earl of Rochester. Having passed through some intermediate hands, it came into those of the Prince de Strahremberg. Minister Plenipotentiary from Vienna, who made it a scene of gayety, and fitted up in it a theater for amateur performances. It was advertised as the residence and property of the Prince, in the Times of July 3d, 1817. The purchaser on this occasion was Mrs. Damer, who had succeeded by Horace Walpole's bequest to Strawberry Hill, but who had recently given up that house to the Waldrearres. She added to the east end of the mansion a room, which she used as a recently given up that a course to the wald-cyraves. She added to the east end of the mansion a room, which she used as a stadic for her sculpture, but which now is converted into a conservatory; and here she frequently entertained queen Caroina as a guests. She left the house to her niece. Lady Johnstone; and it was from the Misses Johnstone that it was purchased a few years ago by his Royal Highness the Duc d'Aumale for his nephew, the Comte de Paris, who va-eated it in 1871 on his return to France. Since then it has been unoccupied. The grounds which adjoin the Parish Church of Twickenham, embrace an area of about seven acres of lawn and garden, and "Eel Pie Island," in the Thames, forms part of the estate. The house it-self is a large, red brick structure, with a hugh pitched roof, rather after the style of kensington Palace, and has, probably,

ROMANCE OF A POOR YOUNG MAN The freaks of fortune are unaccounta-e. One of the latest whims the fickle goldess has seen fit to exercise upon her subjects nearly concerns a former Indian-spelitan, and the history of his strange vicissitudes is as strange and dramatic as the imagination of a novelist can in-vent. The name of the lucky favorite of ter for these places should be handed inside the fortune who is about to enter upon a large fortune in this city is Henry Page. His history is as follows: In 1858 his father, J. M. Page, a worthy mechanic, removed from this city to St. Joseph. Mo. In the new and growing West Page hoped to accumulate a larger store of spare cash than he had ever been able to spare cash than he had ever been able to spare cash than he had ever been able to spare cash than he had ever been able to spare cash than he had ever been able to spare cash than he had ever been able to spare cash than he had ever been able to spare cash than he had ever been able to spare cash than he had ever been able to spare cash than he had ever been able to spare cash than he had ever been able to spare cash than he had ever been able to spare cash than he had ever been able to spare cash than he had ever been able to spare cash than he had ever been able to spare a spare as the and so far from becoming a Cressus Page lost what little he had taken from here, and shortly after his removal was taken sick and died in poverty. He left a wife and three children by a former marriage, and as a last resort they were forced to take quarters in the County Poorhouse. The little ones, as they grew up so as to be able to earn their own livelihood, be able to earn their own livelihood, were taken out by citizens. Some time ago it was discovered that the first wife of Fage had once owned an estate in this city, which, though compartively valueless at the time of her death, has since grown into a splendid fortune in itself. A gentleman of this city, thinking that he could discover the right heir, went from here to Missouri some time ago, and after much trouble succeeded in finding the survivor of the family. The missing heir, Henry Page, the son of the unlucky carpenter, he found in the tamily of Mr. Penny, of Platte county, and brought him before Judge Pettigrew, of the Ruchanan Probate Court, where his dentity was fully established, and the information given that he was heir to 80 acres of land within a mile and a half of Indianapolis, and several thousand dollars in money which had heen left on acres of land within a mile and a half of Indianapolis, and several thousand dolars in money, which had been left on interest by his mother. The property is understood to be worth about $50,000. The young man, who has been in a good family, and well educated, is now twenty-one years old, and started on Monday last from his Western home to enter upon his fortune and assume formal possession of his weath near this city.—[Indianapolis Sentine]. polis Sentinel

MAKING THINGS LIVELY.

The Philadelphia Dispatch publishes the following story at the expense of Reading, which the papers of that city denies with true local dignity: Some years ago, says Max Adler, in writing to a paper, a new fire company was organized at Reading, and the members one evening thought they would have a little innocent fun at the expense of Hopkins, their foreman. They decided to rush around with the engine to Hopkin's house after dark to throw up their ladders, pull out their hose, climb on his roof, and scare him with the belief that his dwelling was on fire. But that very day Hopkins moved out of the house, and a Presbyterian clergyman moved in, without the company being aware of the change. So about 8 o'clock the humorists dashed out, and went through all the movements—getting on the roof and splashing water around and creating a terrific disturbance generally. A rival company, noticing what was going on, also hurried to the scene, and not understanding the joke, attached their hose to the plug, smashed in the front window, and began to empty a two-inch stream on the family of that Presbyterian clergyman. They sqirted into all the rooms, split up the window-shutter with an ax, broke down the front door, ran out the furniture, tore off the shingles and bawled through the trumptes until the hired girl had convulsions on the kitchen stairs. The first company tried to explain, but the new-comers thought an effort was be-Some years ago, says Max Adler, in

A Dog's Sagacht.—A well-known citizen of Boston says that he recently had occasion to go to Portland street to pay a small bill. Arriving at Portland street with the dog, he met the man he wished to see on the sidewalk, and there paid the bill, at the same time dropping a twenty dollar bill on the curbstone, though he knew nothing about it till his arrival home some two hours afterward. Finding this twenty dollar bill gone, he took his dog, Jess, and started back. On reaching Subdury street, he called his dog, showed him a twenty dollar bill, looked about on the ground as if hunting for it, and told the dog to "smell it out." The dog then started off with his nose to the ground in front of his master, and pushing round into Portland street, where the bill was paid, he stopped, poked the dirt with his nose and in a few minutes ran up to his master with the lost twenty dollar bill in his mouth. That looks like a very tough story, but if truthful men are to be believed, then is this story true. Bishop & Sabin, ATTORNEYS AT LAW. PIOCHE, LINCOLN COUNTY, NEV.
